

Overview

The program is specially customized

by the School of Chinese Studies and Exchange,

SISU for international students who want to study in China.

With the concept of "Internet + international education" and relying on the most cutting-edge education technology and teaching modes, the program is divided into two stages: learning at home and study in China.

In the first year, students have to complete the specialized fundamental courses in their home country, and then begin to learn the core courses in China since the second year. Adopting 1+3 education mode, the program has changed the traditional way of studying in China, which can achieve the goal of talent training more accurately and efficiently and ensure the high quality of international education.

Objective

It aims to cultivate versatile talents with global vision and Chinese proficiency.

Through professional learning and training, which aims to enhance students' understanding of Chinese culture and knowledge of economic and trade, students will be equipped with strong communicative competence and be able to pass the HSK6 test. Graduates can be competent in economic and trade, journalism, translation, Chinese teaching, cultural exchange and other fields, and preliminarily have the ability to research Chinese society.

Duration

Duration: 4-year program with a longest length of study is 6 years (including the first year that learning at home country). Each academic year contains two semesters of autumn and spring.

About the university
